Coach Easel Coleman, mentor of Hope Hi Bobcats, called his protégés from the first of the 1929-30 skirmishes at two o'clock this afternoon and expresses himself as more than satisfied with the number and apparent quality of the youngsters presenting themselves for his approval, each anxious for a chance at making a berth on the regular eleven.

Graduation last year hit the coach a pretty stiff blow, and the death of Fred Eason, who was to have been this year's captain in an auto accident was stunning. Greenes Are Home From North Tour

South Arkansas Industrial Excursion Termed Big Success.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Greene returned home over the week-end from the 10-day Canadian tour sponsored by the South Arkansas Chamber of Commerce. The Greens, who represented Hope in the party of industrial tourists, reported that everyone was delighted with the trip, and the inspection of industrial plants and agricultural developments was carefully noted.

The tourists returned home to Camden late Saturday afternoon, and the party broke up at that point. Luther Ellison, secretary of the South Arkansas Chamber of Commerce, who with Mrs. Ellison led the touring party, was highly complimented for the handling of arrangements.

Lead On Sunday Amusements Cut To Nearly 2 to 1

Total At Noon Monday Shows 100 For; 47 Against.

MONDAY VOTE EVEN

Balloting Over Week-End Is 17 for and 17 Against.

The Star's straw vote on Sunday amusements stood at noon Monday as follows:

CITY For, 99; Against, 40.
COUNTRY For, 1; Against, 7.
TOTAL For, 100; Against, 47.

Voting over the week-end was even up, with 17 votes being cast for Sunday amusements, and 17 against. This was in keeping with the trend of balloting ever since last Thursday, when the pro-Sunday vote started slipping. The total vote last Thursday showed a six-to-one lead for Sunday amusements. Friday the lead was less than four to one; Saturday it had dropped under three to one—and today the open Sunday advocates are barely clinging to a two to one advantage.

The straw vote being conducted by The Star is believed to be the fairest test ever staged by a newspaper in Arkansas. Churches were appealed to early in the voting to have their members participate—and a survey of ballots today indicates that every walk of life is represented.

Opposition Strong
Church members themselves show a wide divergence of opinion; in many cases families do not agree—but behind all of it is the surprising fact that the opposition vote, which so often is missing in a newspaper straw poll, is out in full force.

What the final vote will show, remains to be seen. Friends of the Arkansas Blue Law are steadily closing up the gap, but whether this is due to negligence on the other side, or to an actual superiority in numbers, only the final count will determine.

The Star will close out the ballot this week, wishing however, to get a larger total vote than displayed thus far. All duplications will be checked, and voting qualifications applied to each individual vote.

If you haven't voted yet, be sure to fill out the ballot at the bottom of this page and mail it to The Star, 217 South Main Street, Hope, Arkansas.

Senator Advocate of Preparedness

Robinson Says United States Unpopular Among Nations.

FORT SMITH, Sept. 2.—(AP)—Though pleading for advancement of the cause of world peace, Senator Joe T. Robinson, a Labor Day speaker here, declared that a sound policy of military and naval preparedness was the United States' best guarantee for the security of her people.

"Our government is unpopular among the nations of the world," he said. "Passion, prejudice and ignorance are powerful factors in the affairs of men. Animosity and possible strife easily come through them and a sound military and naval policy is the very cheapest insurance this government can have against an attack by any foe."

Senator Robinson said he thought the time fortuitous for preparations to further world peace but that we would not be justified in ing on the good-will of another power to prevent an attack.

Express Company Employees In East Don't Believe Their Eyes When Hope Watermelon Eases In To Cleveland

Watermelons broke into News-Row with a vengeance last week, and the echo was heard all the way from Fort Worth, Texas, to Cleveland, Ohio.

It all began when L. A. Wilke, of the Fort Worth Press, shipped a fifty-four pound watermelon to the home office of N. E. A. Service, at Cleveland, Ohio. The Newspaper Enterprise Association (NEA), which serves 900 American newspapers, including the Fort Worth Press and Hope Star, publishes a house organ named Snap, which circulates among newspaper men only. The Texas watermelon got its picture in Snap—and when Snap reached Hope last week there was the Texas watermelon as big as life!

The Star was badly scooped, of course, but we had been holding our cards until we were sure of an ace. There were bigger local melons to be had, but we rushed a 100-pounder off to Cleveland at once, and the following telegraphic correspondence took place:

"THE INNOCENT CHEAT"

Stirring Story of Romance and Intrigue Starts Tomorrow in Hope Star

A thrilling story of how a beautiful orphan girl became the pawn of an audacious crook is told in the new serial, "The Innocent Cheat," which starts tomorrow in Hope Star.

Cramped with romance, adventure and intrigue, the story centers about Helen Page, who was the unwitting accomplice of her guardian, Leonard Brent, a clever and unscrupulous crook.

Until she was 18, Helen was reared in an exclusive girls' school. Her guardian showered expensive gifts upon her and she learned to love him for his kindness.

But Brent's apparent kindness was only a cloak for his diabolical scheme to obtain the fortune of an aged millionaire. So tightly did he wrap the tentacles of crime about Helen that, when she finally discovered his deception, she was unable to free herself.

Among the other characters in "The Innocent Cheat" are Bob Ennis and his sister, Eva. Bob, a young lawyer, falls in love with Helen, and suspects Brent's motives. Eva almost wrecks her life because of infatuation for Brent.

This stirring new serial is written by Ruth Dewey Groves, whose stories, "Rich Girl-Poor Girl" and "High Flight," were widely acclaimed by newspaper readers throughout the country.

Watch for the first installment of "The Innocent Cheat" Tuesday in the Hope Star. The subscription price of the Hope Star is 50c per month by carrier or $3.00 per year by mail.

National Guard Unit Back Home

Two Members of Organization In Hospital Only Ones Missing.

When Company "A," Hope unit of the Arkansas National Guard, detained here Sunday after two weeks of camp life, only two members of the organization were missing. Sergeant Ernest Maxwell, who suffered a fractured skull in a fall and Thomas Massey, for a long time an employee of Middlebrook Grocery here, were the two who failed to return with the Company, both of them being in the Army and Navy hospital at Hot Springs, Maxwell recovering from a fractured skull and Massey where he will undergo an operation for appendicitis.

Officers of the company are elated at the showing made at camp, the improvement of last year being noticeable, and expect to get down to work of the next twelve months with a greater degree of appreciation than heretofore known.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—(AP)—The Washington Evening Star says today that Harry Sinclair, wealthy oil operator now serving a sentence in the District of Columbia jail, has been assigned to special duties which afford him opportunity for an auto ride several times a week to a branch clinic a few blocks from the jail building proper.

Dust On Highway Causes Accident

Clarksville Business Man In Serious Condition After Wreck.

CLARKSVILLE, Ark., Sept. 2.—(AP)—Claude Morgan, 32, business man of this city, is in a hospital at Morrilton in a critical condition today as a result of an automobile accident near Morrilton late last night.

The car in which Morgan was riding with Eugene Garrett and Phil Poyner, also of Clarksville, turned over in a ditch after striking the rear of another car while trying to pass a bus. Garrett was driving when the accident occurred.

Dust in clouds on the highway is given as the cause of the turn-over, the fog being so dense the driver was unable to see. Both Garrett and Poyner were injured but neither seriously.

Chicago Cabaret Is Battle Ground

Dimly Lighted Old Cafe Riddled When Pistols Belch Fire.

CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—(AP)—The C. & O. Cafe, a dimly-lighted cabaret at 509 North Clark street, became a gunman's shooting ground early today when Henry Connors, 48, entered the place with a pistol in his hand, looking for trouble.

Connors was killed. His body, with three bullet wounds, was found lying in the passageway between the cabaret and the kitchen bar. Police said there was a probability that others had been wounded as the walls of the place were riddled with bullets, mirrors and chinaware shattered.

A dozen men and women, patrons of the place, which was formerly a favorite resort of Dion O'Banion, were arrested for questioning, but police are secretive, refusing to divulge any information obtained from them.

Dies In Camden Hospital From Internal Injuries

Car Driven By Negroes Smashes Into Car of Hope People.

SON IS UNINJURED

Daughter Who Was Driving Slightly Bruised and Hurt In Collision.

Hope citizens were shocked this morning to learn of the death of Mrs. A. L. Betts in a hospital at Camden from injuries received in an automobile accident near that city late Sunday afternoon. The Betts family is one of the most prominent in Hempstead county for years having had a leading part in the development of this section of the state and being among the heaviest property owners in this territory.

From reports received by relatives here, Mrs. Betts and daughter, Helen, and son, Albert, were driving to Camden for another daughter, Margaret, who had been visiting in that city. Near the city their car was rammed by that of three negroes. Mrs. Betts, on the front seat, was thrown against the front of the car suffering severe cuts about the head and face and being injured internally. She was carried to a hospital where her death occurred at about eight o'clock this morning.

The other two occupants of the car were not seriously hurt, Helen, who was driving, receiving superficial injuries and the son, in the rear seat, uninjured.

Mrs. Betts is survived by her husband and five children, Miss Jennie, at Fordyce, Mrs. Leo Robinson, Miss Margaret and Helen and a son Albert Lea, of Hope.

Relatives here, advised of the accident, left at once for Camden and were with Mrs. Betts to the end.

It was announced this afternoon that funeral services for Mrs. A. L. Betts will be conducted at the family home on South Elm in this city Tuesday morning at ten o'clock Dr. W. R. Anderson officiating and burial in Rose Hill cemetery.

Reports this morning from physicians in attendance on Miss Helen are to the effect that she is more seriously injured than at first thought, cut and bruised about the head and face, with a badly wrench of knee and ankle and severely bruised about the chest.

Eye witnesses to the accident saw that the car striking the Betts car was a Ford roadster, driven by a negro man with two women companions. Just at the brow of a hill the negro attempted to run by another car, and pulling out to pass, ran head on into the car from this place. One of the negroes lost an eye and the other was not reported injured. The negro is being held in jail at Camden pending investigation of the occurrence.

Labor Day Thoughts

TWO pertinent items lie on our desk this Labor Day. The first is a mimeographed letter broadcast by Norman Thomas, leader of the Socialist party in America; and the other is an editorial in the Arkansas Methodist discussing the relation of the church to Capital and Labor.

Mr. Thomas, whose party made the sorriest showing in thirty years at the election last November, is still cheerful. "A survey that has just been completed by the National Executive Committee," he writes, "discloses that there are no less than ten congressional districts which can be carried for the Socialist party next year, provided proper preliminary work is done in the meantime. It is felt that the election of a group of Socialists to the congress will create that psychology of success which is necessary to build a powerful political party of labor in the United States."

Hokum! This nation is too busy building automobiles, and buying them, to array one class against another. There is nothing for the common people in political office-holding, or the Bolsheviks would own more automobiles and Russia would have more miles of paved highways.

So much for the critical view of Labor Day. Here is something constructive. Dr. A. C. Millar, the able editor of the Arkansas Methodist, answers a theologian's charge that the church "isn't changing the essential facts of modern industrial civilization by a hair's breadth," and "it isn't even thinking about them."

"What is said about the nature of factory life," the Methodist declares, "is in a measure true, and yet hours have been shortened, and half and even full holidays are given in practically all industrial life, and women and children are more and more protected from unfavorable conditions. When one remembers that at one time women in this country worked in factories twelve hours a day and in certain European countries women still are hotched with dogs and mules to draw cars in mines, we feel that a distinct advance is being made in this country."

"The chief reason why the churches are criticized is, because, in the industrial disputes as a rule, neither side is wholly right, and the churches must recognize the element of right in each, and the churches have in their membership representatives of both elements and must minister to each. . . . What is needed more than anything else is that our individual members become more interested in settling all difficulties according to the 'Golden Rule'. When we learn to apply this rule more perfectly between individual members of the church, we shall also apply it in our dealing with groups."

A good thought for this Labor Day is, that America, although wealthier and more settled every year, is still the peerless land of opportunity she was in the days of our forefathers. The estate a man is born to, he is not fixed in, as in European countries. If humble and poor, he may possibly become rich and great. A farm boy from near Prescott, —Charles McCain— was the other day named president of one of the world's largest banks.

Or if born to wealth, he must fight to maintain himself. This country does not countenance idleness. There is more to work than mere money-making. There is character-building, and self-discipline—and a nation built on this bed-rock will survive foreign wars and domestic conflict.

Is Dallas Air-Minded?

IN THE memory of even the youngest men there was a time when a man who had ridden in an airplane was a man-set-apart. He was looked-up to by the children, lionized by the girls and secretly envied by his mates. Today there are comparatively few who have not been up, at least for a short "hop." A man of thirty who has never been off the ground is more of a novelty than one who has. The crowds that frequent Love Field each Sunday, as high as 15,000 on good days is testimony of the fact that fear of the air is passing rapidly. The recent visit of several tri-motored Fokker airplanes under the auspices of the Texas and Pacific Railway, with the hint that some passengers would be taken up during the stop, pulled such a crowd of prospects that the ships were forced to remain long after their scheduled time to accommodate everyone. As the men, women and children were no tense, alarmed faces. Rather they showed joyous anticipation peered out through the small windows at the crowd there.

Crusoe, Jr., Discovers Footprints!

WASHINGTON LETTER

Washington.—"Work for the Indians!" is the keynote of the program which Secretary of the Interior Ray Lyman Wilbur is working out for the rehabilitation of the 350,000 red men on the government's 200 reservations.

"We want to get them away from the reservations," Wilbur says. "Reservations are the worst kind of places for them and they ought to have a chance to share in American prosperity."

The next session of Congress probably will receive requests from the Indian bureau for authorization and appropriations for an Indian employment agency, which will be the foremost item in plans now under formulation by Wilbur and Indian Commissioner Charles J. Rhoads.

He Hasn't Much Chance
Wilbur and Rhoads are going on the theory that the Indian's lack of opportunity for productive effort is largely responsible for his many troubles. Health conditions on the reservations, which have long been a public scandal, are now traced to under-nourishment brought about by the Indian's inability to feed himself.

Baby death rates and tuberculosis death rates have been four or five times as high among the Indians as among white populations, and trachoma has for years been a racial scourge.

The custom has been to attribute this to the non-resistance of the aborigines to white men's diseases. Congressional committees have gone to the reservations to investigate, seen the terrible conditions for themselves and returned to yell for more doctors, nurses and hospitals.

But Wilbur believes he has gotten to the root of the trouble when he elites under-nourishment as the great evil of the Indians.

The Institute for Government Research, after its exhaustive study, reported that 90 per cent of the reservation Indians were under-nourished.

Wilbur says they have lacked food because they have lacked jobs. On the reservations they are isolated and absolutely idle, with no chance to earn any money. So they sit and starve and die. Meanwhile, the southwestern country calls for labor and half a million Mexicans have been imported for work in the last 10 years. The theory is that, with the reservations so nearby, tens of thousands of these jobs could have been taken over by the Indians. The Indians are regarded as good workers, clever with hands and tools and machines.

The Interior Secretary's theory, of course, is a frightful commentary on the intelligence and competence of previous administrators of Indian affairs. It is a tacit admission that the third-rate politicians who have landed Interior Department and Indian bureau jobs in the past have let their situation go from bad to worse while the Indians suffered and died.

The government disclaims responsibility for feeding its Indians wards. It has been many years since they were rationed. Reservation superintendents are still supposed to ration destitute and decrepit men and women, but that hasn't affected the general condition of under-nourishment.

Dispatches from Paris announce several new feminine styles. That will be quite a change.

Squash Loses the Old Family Bumpy Look

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 26.—After years' of experimentation, Dr. Donald F. Jones, geneticist at the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment station, has announced development of a straight summer squash.

Except for the conventional bumps on the skin, the squash resembles a yellow cucumber. Dr. Jones declares the straight squash is good from end to end and not only is more attractive in appearance but more economical.

WHEN CHILDREN NEEDED LAXATIVE

Oklahoma Lady Gives Interesting Account of Long Use of Theodor's Black-Draught.

Sageeay, Okla.—"I have taken Black-Draught ever since I was a child," says Mrs. Cora Maberry, of this place. "My mother used it, in bringing up her family, and after I had a home of my own, I continued to use it."
"My children did not mind taking Black-Draught, and so when they got upset with stomach spells, or were constipated, I gave them Black-Draught tea."
"If I found that they were taking cold, I was quick to start giving them Black-Draught, as it helped them to throw off the impurities."
"My children are all grown now and have homes of their own, but I still keep Black-Draught in the house and use it myself when I wake up in the morning feeling dull and 'headache', and have a bad taste in my mouth."
"Black-Draught is a simple remedy for constipation, and I prefer it to others because it is purely vegetable. I always feel better after I have taken a course of it."
"Get the genuine Theodor's Black-Draught which has been in successful use since 1835."

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Molly Burnham, involved in an unpleasant romance has returned from the country where she sought seclusion to her home in Boston. Following the published reports of her engagement to Bob Newton, Molly leaves the city to escape the on slaughter of reporters and photographers.

Bob Newton, to whom she is more or less engaged, is the widower of her dearest friend. Following the death of his wife, Molly took his little girl, to care for, who she adores, she has consented now, in order to keep the child to a trial engagement with Bob, an unstable young man.

Bob promises to keep the experimental engagement a secret, but breaks his promise, and shows the diamond he has for Molly to a show girl. The story assumes sensational dimensions, because of Molly's wide fame. Although still very young, she has two successful plays on Broadway, and a novel among the best sellers. Newspaper people, scenting an unusual romance, write columns. Then Red Flynn, who thinks Bob has treated Molly very badly, knocks him down and out. Molly, when she learns of that regrettable incident, is afraid that Bob will wreck his vengeance on her, and kidnap Rita.

Now Go On With the Story
CHAPTER XLVII

The night, surprisingly enough passed without event. Molly wished it would pour for a week. Reporters hate to hang around on wet nights. If they were delegated to watch the house, they had sought a warmer, dryer haven.

But in the morning, very early, the telephone rang. The first of the news hounds was on the wire. "No word from Miss Burnham yet."

"No," lied Natsu. "We have no idea when she will return. We have heard nothing."

Molly went into the kitchen, and made an omelet. Rita was not awake yet, but she loved omelets. Molly would make a beautiful putty one, with jelly in it, and they would have it together in her room.

While she was moving about the kitchen, the cook's cat rubbed against her legs, purring a lovely song. Molly stroked his beautiful arched back, and the cat purged more happily, in an ecstasy of feline joy. Then Molly stopped, and lifted him in her arms, and laid her cheek against the cat's soft fur.

"Nice kitty," she crooned.

"Nice, nice kitty," coaxed Molly. "Love me, kitty," coaxed Molly. "Love me, Don't go away."

But in a moment she saw that the cat's love was strictly practical, with an eye toward the morning's milk. Cook set a saucer on the floor, and the feline animal leaped from Molly's arms, to rub against her legs, and purr his lovely song to her.

"Cats," observed the cook cynically, "are like men. Always looking for something when they're affectionate."

Molly prepared a tray, and set it with her prettiest china. She and Rita would have a real party. Strawberries with clotted cream. And milk in the pigeons' blood goblets that Rita admired so much. Cook's hot muffins, and

Bob gruffly. "The child's old enough to speak for herself."

"Oh, Bob, she isn't!"

Molly laid her hand restrainingly on his arm. But he had risen to his feet, and was striding toward the door. He threw her hand aside impatiently.

"Come in, Rita. Daddy wants you."

She stood in the doorway, with her stuffed bunny hugged to her plump, like a quaint child on a magazine cover.

"His name's Cherie," she said. "Marie named him. Don't you think it's a pretty name?"

"A beautiful name," agreed Bob politely. "Come here, Rita. Daddy wants to ask you something."

"Don't, Bob!" begged Molly. "Don't! It's cruel. You mustn't!"

But Bob had stooped, and lifted her into his arms. He kissed her gently.

"Mama doesn't love your daddy he told her, 'and so daddy must go away, and take his little girl with him.'"

His voice was very grave and sad. Rita looked from one to the other. Molly had begun, softly, to cry. The child's eyes grew big and frightened.

"Mama!" she cried.

And, slipping from her father's arms, she ran to Molly, and threw her arms about her.

"We'll go away, dear," Bob was saying, "because mama wants us to. Rita and daddy together."

The child cowered in Molly's arms, clinging and crying.

"I'll be good!" she promised. "I'll be good!"

"Oh sweetheart, it isn't that," cried Molly. "Daddy wants to take you away, darling. He's going to break both our hearts. But you'll feel better by and by, because you're only a little girl. And little girls always feel better by and by."

"I don't want to go," protested the child. "Don't make me daddy."

"Do you want to stay here, and let me go away all alone?" questioned Bob gravely. "Do you want your poor daddy to go where nobody loves him, without his little girl to keep him company?"

Rita buried her head on Molly's shoulder. She was sobbing unrestrainedly, and her breath came in great, heart-wrenching gasps.

"Don't you torment the child!" commanded Molly, raising her tearstained face from Rita's curls. "I never heard of such a cruel thing in my life!"

"But she has to make up her mind," insisted Bob stubbornly. "Come now, Rita, stop your crying, dear, and be a brave girl. Tell daddy if you want him to go away all alone, and leave you here."

"No, No," wailed the child piteously. "No, daddy."

"You see?" He faced Molly triumphantly. "Blood is stronger than water."

Then suddenly his manner changed. "My God, Molly, can't we fix things up? This is horrible."

"Dreadful!" She shuddered. "Poor baby. There! Rita. Don't cry, sweetheart. Daddy isn't going to talk that way any more."

Bob patted his daughter's tousled hair. His eyes were wet, and his voice unsteady.

"There, there," he soothed. "It's all right, Rita. Daddy's not going to hurt his baby. Everything's going to be all right."

He averted his gaze from Molly's.

"We're not in any shape to go over this now," he said. "I'll get in touch with you by and by. You won't mind if I phone for an appointment later? Will you come to the door with daddy, Rita? Poor little girl. I'm sorry I made you cry."

He took her in his arms. He took her in his arms.

"Goodbye, Molly. It's a ghastly mess. I'm sorrier than I can say. But there must be some way out. I want to do the right thing. You believe that, I hope?"

She nodded miserably.

"Yes, Bob. Your technique's tough, that's all." She smiled through her tears. "You and I, both—we've a perfect genius for line, she had changed into street clothes. She snatched the telephone from Natsu's hands.

"Red, Bob's taken Rita away with him! Half an hour ago. No, I don't know where he's gone. No. No. I tell you! I don't know anything at all about it. I've just missed her. I thought she was with Marie. Oh, what shall I do? Yes. Yes. I am calm."

She hung up the receiver. "Mr. Flynn says I must be calm, Natsu," she told him. "Calm!"

She laughed hysterically. "Don't Miss Burnham!" cried Marie. "You mustn't take on that way!"

CHAPTER XLVIII

Red had promised to come immediately. Molly paced up and down the hall, wringing her hands. Sometimes she pressed her fingers to her lips, to stifle the screams that were in her throat.

"Oh, God," she prayed, "don't let him keep Rita. Please don't let him keep her."

When the bell rang, she rushed past Natsu, to open the door herself. To her utter amazement, it was not Red—but Jack—whom she admitted.

"I've read Ashes of Desire," he announced surprisingly.

And, stepped in, he closed the door behind him.

"You've what?" she cried.

"Read Ashes of Desire," he repeated patiently. "Your book. I never read it before, Molly."

She stared at him. "I don't know what you're talking about," she told him foolishly. "Rita's gone, Jack. Bob's taken her away. What shall I do?"

"Rita?" he repeated. "I didn't come to talk about Rita."

Natsu and Mrie had disappeared, and the two were alone. Simply, as though he had done it only yesterday, Jack put out his arms. And straightaway, like a child, Molly nestled in their circle.

"Dearest!" He held her closely, as though he could never let her go. "I don't understand," she murmured. "Did Red send you? Do you know about Rita?"

He shook his head.

"No, darling. I went back to New York, when I learned you had left town. I didn't ever want to see you, nor hear of you again."
